

After coaching for a number of years Justine took a break from the rink to focus on graduate school. Having finished her degree Justine missed skating and has found herself back coaching. During this time Justine followed the sport extensively – continuing to stay current on new programs and teaching practices. As well, this time provided her a chance to teach students at a university level and participate in a number of science outreach opportunities. Justine strives to make her lessons a fun learning environment where students are challenged and encouraged to succeed and become their best.
